as we see it

In a burst of enthusiasm inspired by high ideals, a sense of dedication and a strong education lobby, the Federal Communications Commission two years ago set aside about 250 television channels for noncommercial educational stations. Today, progress being what it is, four such stations are on the air.

Support for these educational stations comes variously from state and local governments, wealthy individuals, public solicitation and private charitable organizations. Commercial broadcasters and equipment manufacturers have donated more than $1,500,000 worth of buildings, towers, studios and equipment.

If these stations confined themselves to bringing lecturers and demonstrations to classrooms as a direct aid in instruction of pupils, the expense might be justified. But the emphasis is not on classroom education; it is on adult education, and most programs are scheduled in the early morning or evening.

Taxpayers' money, and other money which perhaps would be better spent in more pay for teachers, is being used to present programs for a very small minority of viewers. If educational stations were the only source of cultural shows, this might be justifiable. But commercial outlets, with their better-trained and more experienced personnel, are devoting a great deal of effort and time to the production of programs on a high cultural level. And some local commercial stations present shows designed specifically for in-school viewing.

The educators have had two years to think. It is time they started thinking about education.

Turnabout: but Toastettes have lovely faces, too. See next page.

Ladies of the Chorus

Whoa, Wolves!...They're Just Housewives at Heart

LIKE THE old gray mare, chorus girls ain't what — according to popular legend—they used to be. This somewhat melancholy fact goes double for television chorines. For TV allows chorus girls to work secretaries' hours and lead housewives' lives.

Today's television chorus girl is as different from her high-living predecessor as Laraine Day is from Felix Knight. Instead of singing about diamonds, TV's high-kickers chant, "A Toastettes: Cynthia Scott, Rae MacGregor, Hazel Patterson, Audrey Peters. (Seated) Norma Thornton, Franca Baldwin.

Husband Is A Girl's Best Friend."

And they know whereof they speak, for more than half are married.

Among the June Taylor girls on The Jackie Gleason Show, Lynn Joelson and Lee Joyce are married to doctors; Pat Cotton's husband operates a New Jersey taxi line; Jayne Manners is the wife of comic Mickey Manners, and Doris McKenzie is wed to an actor.

Five of the six Toastettes on Ed Sullivan's Toast of the Town also claim husbands.

The network press departments are happy that the quality of TV chorines makes unnecessary frantic attempts to quash scandal. On the other hand, in an effort to glamorize the girls, the drum-beaters have tried to keep their marital status quiet.

Fan Males

Says one network official: "These beautiful girls have an appeal for the average male viewer. We don't want to destroy that appeal. We don't deny they're married. We just don't publicize the fact."

The girls are happy to agree; they want to keep on leading the kind of life which television permits—idyllic, after years of toiling late hours in night clubs and theaters.

"Before TV," Toastette Captain Rae MacGregor says earnestly, "you got through theater work at midnight, or a night club stint at sunup. What kind of a life could you lead in that rat race?"

For Toast of the Town, the girls rehearse four days each week between 10:00 and 5:00. Sunday, the day of the show, they're at the studio from 11:00 to sign-off time at 9:00.

Rae has been a Toastette since the show's premiere nearly six years ago. Before that, the beauty appeared in a number of Broadway shows.

"I'd just come off the road with 'Call Me Mister,'" she recalled, "when I was offered this spot with Ed Sullivan. At the time, there were no unions and the show paid only $50 a week, which was much less than I could earn on Broadway. But I was so sick of the crazy hours that I took the job despite the money."

Now, she's married to Toast of the Town director Johnny Wray and has ample opportunity to enjoy a comfortable home in Riverdale, N.Y.

"If you really want to prove how different TV is for us," chimed in Audrey Peters, who was married only last February to publicist Johnny Friedkin, "remember that none of us got married until after we were working on TV. And the same goes for the Gleason kids, too."

Recalling her appearances in the famed Mack Sennett ballet in Broadway's "High Button Shoes," Audrey continued, "I was in my teens and all the fellows I knew were either in college or had jobs. If they had to be up at seven in the morning, they couldn't wait until midnight before starting out on a date. Believe me, I was pretty lonesome."

"Don't forget to mention the money," added Cynthia Scott, another Broadway deserter. "With the union in, the minimum for an hour show like ours is $140.50 a week. On Broadway, with the bad hours and traveling, a dancer still makes $85."

Cynthia, who's married to singer Ted Scott, pointed out, "The hours are even better than office hours. We don't usually start until 10:00, so I have time to tidy up the house after my husband leaves. We usually quit about 4:30, so I miss the rush-hour traffic and have dinner on the stove by the time Ted comes home."

Norma Thornton, wife of actor Tiger Andrew, interrupted, "You kids haven't mentioned the most important thing—security.

Chorine at home: Cynthia Scott's unfazed by sewing machine, broom or stove.

"On Broadway, you get a job and wait for the show to go into rehearsal. Then for four weeks, you draw rehearsal pay of $45. You have six weeks out of town, open in New York, and, unless it's a hit, close right away. Then the same thing all over again. Here, we work 52 weeks a year."

Oddly, though TV shows are canceled as often as checks, those with chorus girls have lasted.

Hazel Patterson, married to salesman Allan Fehlandt, and the mother of two-year-old Alanna, is one of TV's many dancing mamas.

"And why not?" she asked. "I know other mothers who would like to go back to work, but the salaries they earn wouldn't pay for the nurse. I have quite a bit left over. And let's be honest. What young couple today can't use the extra money?"

Look! A Single One!

Franca Baldwin, the only Toastette still single, smiled when the conversation turned to her.

"I'm sorry I'm ruining the marital record. But, believe me, I've never been happier in my life than since I've been on TV."

Franca, a former member of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, recalls, "With the Ballet, all we did was tour. It was always running for a train, getting off, checking into a hotel, running to the theater, doing a show, going back to the hotel, sleeping, getting up early and doing the same thing all over. I forgot that I had a home and family. As for dates, to me they were just numbers on a calendar. Who had the opportunity?

"Now, I'm settled in New York with my sister, have a regular job and regular hours. It's wonderful. Who says you can't have your cake and eat it, too?"

The call came to go back to rehearsal, leaving time for just one more question: "What would you say you liked best about TV?"

The reply came in a chorus: "Our husbands!"

Rat Race on the Cheese Show?

WHEN sponsors of Kraft Television Theater expanded their schedule to two full-hour dramatic programs each week, industry wags immediately started to yock it up about a "rat race on the cheese show." And no wonder. No Hollywood movie studio or Broadway production firm has ever attempted anything like the 104 hours a year of dramatic fare that Kraft is now presenting.

But the J. Walter Thompson Co. advertising agency, producers of the Kraft shows on both NBC and ABC, has stopped the wags in their tracks. Nothing resembling a rat race has materialized. Instead, this mammoth production schedule has been developed so that the two weekly shows are put together with the minimum of confusion that can be expected.

Viewers apparently like the results, too. Latest ARB program ratings indicate the NBC version outranks all other hour-long TV dramas in size of audience and the ABC offering is gaining each week.

Weeks Of Work, One Hour Of Play

Kraft employs six full-time producer-directors. Each is responsible for one program every third week. But that doesn't mean they have much time for relaxation between shows. From the selecting of a script and the initial casting through to the final performance, each program is three weeks in preparation.

After agreeing with the writer on the script, the producer huddles with casting director Marian Dougherty. They explore the list of available actors, and ask the candidates to come in for a reading.

For a "name" actor no reading is necessary. As an example, producer-director Fred Carney, brother of Jackie Gleason's Art Carney, for some time held a completed script based on R. C. Sherriff's "Home at Seven." He was waiting until closing notices were posted for Elmer Rice's "The Winner," a Broadway show starring Tom Helmore.

After three weeks: Valerie Cossart, Tom Helmore in a successful Kraft drama . . .

As soon as Carney learned the closing date, he phoned Helmore and explained the role. Then, about 14 days before the telecast, the script was sent by messenger (Kraft people don't trust the mails with such documents) to Helmore's home.

For five days, Helmore studied the script. He also discussed it several times with Carney via telephone. (Helmore's role was that of a mild-mannered London bank clerk who feared he had unwittingly committed a murder during a period of amnesia.) Eight days before the performance date, Helmore and the rest of the cast met to run through the show.

. . . that Director Fred Carney quickly whipped into shape without fuss or furor.

First rehearsal (this one was on a Wednesday) lasts only about two hours. Each of the actors reads his part to give Carney an idea of how the various characters are to be integrated.

The actors return on Friday for another run-through. At this session, Carney begins planning camera shots.

On Monday and Tuesday, the cast, having memorized roles, again rehearses. The technical director who will work with the cameraman during the show, the head cameraman and the soundman are usually present. They watch the rehearsals with a master floor-plan of the studio spread out before them and block out the camera angles.

The cast moves into the studio where the program will be telecast for the first time about noon on Wednesday. The sets and backdrops are all in place. The cameras remain idle, however, until the following day, since live camera rehearsal is costly and is held to a minimum. During the Wednesday rehearsal the actors run through the complete play twice.

Carney's production assistants also conduct a final check on timing of the show. Wednesday is the final rehearsal, too, in which Carney can work with the actors on their characterizations, since he must devote most of the following day to his camera direction.

The Show Shapes Up

The cast arrives at the studio on Thursday at 2 P.M., just seven-and-a-half hours before air time. Once more they run through the script, this time with Carney and his technicians in the control booth to determine how the show looks on the monitors. At about 5:00, the actors go out for dinner. They return to the studio, made-up and in costume, for the dress rehearsal at 7:00.

After rehearsal, Carney calls the cast together for last-minute instructions. The actors then relax until the show takes the air at 9:30.

Besides Carney, the other five Kraft producer-directors are Stan Quinn, Maury Holland, Dick Dunlap, Harry Herrmann and J. Fielder Cook.

The average cast for a Kraft production comprises some 15 to 18 actors. With four production units in various phases of rehearsal all the time, that means that Kraft employs an average of 60 to 70 actors each week. But are they caught up in a rat race? Never. Well . . . hardly ever.

SUSPENSE—within limits

PRODUCER STAUNCHES FLOW OF BLOOD AND TONES DOWN SHOW'S THUNDER

AFTER YEARS of wholesale bloodletting, Suspense has apparently decided to apply a tourniquet. Producer Martin Manulis, who took over after the show had shed gallons of gore, has revamped the program's point of view.

"The public is becoming surfeited with outlandish crime," theorizes Manulis. "B movies and early television thrived on gangland stories, but now the viewer has to make some sort of personal identification with what he's watching or there's no impact. We've moved away from horror and unnecessary violence because there's been a reaction against it. In general, an audience won't accept in a living room what it will in a movie house. So we've had to adjust."

Room service in jail was new idea in Suspense drama with Joseph Weisman and Irene Cowan.

Producer Martin Manulis, l., director Robert Mulligan discuss not-so-gory details.

Adjusting has proved to be a pretty wise idea. The show's rating is up. So is fan mail. So is the Manulis morale, at these signs of public approval of what is unquestionably a more moral approach to TV programming.

Not that violence is out altogether. Carnage, when called for, is used—but as tastefully as Manulis can manage. "There'll be no more hoods or professional gangsters," reports the producer. "We now deal exclusively with crime melodrama, involving recognizable people. In many cases we've found ourselves doing documentaries, rather than criminal suspense stories."

Good Shows Can Be Better

Though Suspense was a successful show long before he came into the picture, Manulis has no trouble justifying his position.

"Any show reflects the people who work on it," he explains. "Other shows, like Martin Kane and Man Against Crime, must stick with detective stories. But we considered Suspense primarily a dramatic show and so we didn't hesitate to expand it beyond routine crime stuff. We now try to do stories based on real crimes. We've also used stories by Dickens, Zola and Balzac. Our writers have found that trying to stress reality of behavior almost automatically results in less violence."

Suspense was almost caught in its own (excuse the expression!) web when it went all out to present the "real life story" of a Canadian with an incredible war record. They intended to televise author Quentin Reynolds' version of this story, "The Man Who Wouldn't Talk." Shortly after they bought the rights, the story was found to be not only incredible, but untrue. Suspense converted liability into asset by having Reynolds on the show to explain how it was discovered "The Man Who Wouldn't Talk" had done nothing else but.

Suspense Suspended

If the truth were known, Manulis would like, every so often, to smuggle in a story that isn't really a suspense story at all. Occasionally he surrenders to the temptation.

A Broadway director before taking on TV chores, Manulis once had the job of "directing" Tallulah Bankhead in her hugely successful revival of "Private Lives," an experience which would seem ideal preparation for the whacky world of television. Actually, however, he credits Tallu with furnishing fresh and valuable slants on the drama business.

Right now Manulis is striving to get some special point of view for each Suspense plot, so the stories will steer clear of hackneyed whodunit formulas. If the public starts crying for more blood, he'll reluctantly loosen the granny knot on that tourniquet. Though some of the old chop-licking crowd have given up the show as too well-mannered, Manulis doesn't recommend Suspense for the kiddies. It's still pretty scary at times.

Things are SHIPP SHAPE on 'My Friend Irma'

MARY SHIPP, Marie Wilson's current roommate in My Friend Irma, has been a successful actress since the age of eight, when she toured Southern California in a stock company production of "The Little Princess."

By the time she was 14, Mary had discovered the perfect solution to the problem of how to be an actress and a student at the same time: radio, with its brief rehearsal hours. At 18, a radio veteran, she won the role of 13-year-old Becky Thatcher in radio's "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer."

In more recent years Mary has played Henry's girlfriend, Kathleen, in radio's "The Aldrich Family;" Gildersleeve's teacher in "The Great Gildersleeve" and — on TV also — Luigi's school-teacher, Miss Spalding in "Life With Luigi."

She won the Kay Foster role in both the radio and TV versions of My Friend Irma despite a complete hands-off policy on the part of her TV executive husband, Harry Ackerman, and of Marie Wilson, one of her oldest and closest friends. Marie, despite non-stop hand-wringing, kept mum during the auditions, even when "introduced" to "Miss Shipp."

Mary and her husband live in Beverly Hills with their two children, Susan, nine, and Stephen, six.

Chicago Dateline

TV's Week: CBS' Edward R. Murrow (of See It Now and Person To Person fame) is the latest target for Windy City honors. The Chicago Council on Foreign Relations cited him at their luncheon meeting May 14, and on May 26, Murrow will accept a Roosevelt College award at a dinner of the school's Association of Founders and Friends, observing the ninth anniversary of Roosevelt's founding. Murrow and ABC news commentator Elmer Davis were singled out as 1954 winners for "distinguished service to the principles of American democracy."

Murrow

Less violence in children's programs and fewer western movies should be the goal of TV programming, claims one group of PTA mothers. This second division reported these observations last week after surveying WBKB shows for one month. Surprisingly, these women differed sharply with the first wave of PTA mothers who maintained a few weeks ago that video violence was beneficial, because it helped the moppets work off a certain natural hostility.

America's new sweetheart, Betty White, bowed on WGN-TV Sunday (May 16) at 9 PM in her Life With Elizabeth film series. The new show removes the hapless Twenty Questions once more from the Chicago schedule.

Week's Highlights: Down You Go, which enjoyed a brief surprise return to WGN-TV's schedule at 8:30 PM Wednesdays is about to become a programming casualty again. It'll happen May 26 when Channel 9 takes the Stock Car Races, an hour production, which will pre-empt The Music Show here.

The guest list is piling up for Irv Kupcinet's 28-hour Cerebral Palsy telethon on WBKB starting Friday, May 21 at 10 PM. Local TV and radio talent will be supplemented by Walter Slezak, Eddie Bracken, Melvyn Douglas and other stage and screen stars of prominence. TV's Toni Gilman heads the women's division and columnist Sig Sakowicz is in charge of a special foreign language division, new this year.

Advance Tips on Shows: Effective May 31, WGN-TV will substitute half hour films for its Four To Go quiz show.

THAT O'NEIL BOY

FAITH AND BEGORRA! WITH DANNY, 'TIS MORE THAN THE LUCK OF THE IRISH.

DANNY O'NEIL returned from Ellinor Village, Florida, recently with a tan that would make an Indian blush and a wonder-filled account of life on America's sunny strip. It was enough to put the green eyes of envy into the most travel-hardened soul.

All he had to do for the trip was sing "The Star Spangled Banner" at the Mrs. America pageant there and serve as the Illinois director for the contest locally. This he did with the same touch of Irish blarney he displays on his WBKB program, The Danny O'Neil Show (11 AM, Mon. through Fri.).

That he was chosen to do the patriotic honors at the Mrs. America pageant comes as no surprise to Chicagoans. Around here, he's been considered a top favorite TV star for quite a spell.

Neither was it a surprise when he emerged as TV GUIDE's winner recently in the best Chicago audience participation show division. Danny has been accepting the magazine's awards with regularity each year since 1951, when he first won the statuette for top local male singer. (He now owns six such mantelpieces.) In addition, Danny is also the proud possessor of this magazine's trophy for top golfer in the 1951 tourney, a prize of no little merit.

Familiarity Breeds Respect

Between his golfing and singing, Danny cuts quite a respectable figure among Chicago's gallery of TV artists. His voice, which is of the wistful Irish vintage, is equally adaptable for today's pop tunes as well as those syrupy ballads of yesteryear.

However, he's not hemmed in by a singing-only talent. Danny has also attained the status of entertainer, a role he's been pining for ever since he settled permanently in Chicago in 1950.

Before that, he had been in one or another form of show business for approximately 20 years, but had never touched television. Radio was his favorite home ground. Affiliated with CBS for most of his career, he had worked for that network in Chicago, New York, Hollywood and Las Vegas. He had also sung with bands and orchestras.

Thus, when Danny made his dive into TV here, he discovered he was a stranger in paradise. And, after sampling video's desirable limelight, he decided this was the career he was destined for. From then on, Chicago viewers caught frequent glimpses of Erin's son on such local shows as Breakfast With The O'Neils, The Danny O'Neil Show, Foto-Quiz, Musical Nite-Cap, Our Song, Breakfast With Danny O'Neil and now, The Danny O'Neil Show.

Going Bing's Way?

Now that he's progressed just about as far as Chicago limits will allow, Danny has sighted his next objective: a network TV show from the Windy City. All production on his current program is fashioned with that in mind. Danny has trained himself to become an emcee ("The epitome of my ambition is to be another Bing Crosby who, for my money, is one of the greatest entertainers alive.") He has surrounded himself with the talent he considers potentially the tops—songstress Nancy Wright, piano stylist Chet Roble, and the Prairie Ramblers, a musical combo.

He has also converted the tone of his show from one strictly musical to a potpourri of miscellany. The show hosts a different women's club each day; features a mystery picture for a contest gimmick, interviews, a surprise element during which a mother in the audience hears a letter from her son in Korea, and of course, an inevitable march of melody. Danny's theory of giving viewers a taste of the unexpected each day has obviously paid off in high dividends. WBKB execs have upped his time from a half hour to 55 minutes, he enjoys a healthy sponsor relationship, he boasts one of the strongest mail pulls on Channel 7 and his audiences are booked straight through next November.

As far as personal life goes, Danny is now wed to an attractive Irish colleen, the former Pati Geraghty, who got her start in Chicago television on one of his shows. The O'Neils' most current production is a winsome four-month-old lass named Margaret Kathleen Louise O'Neil.

Danny's ambitious nature once led him to less productive fields. One venture he'd just as soon forget was an ill-fated run as a restaurateur. After closing his Oriental-style night club, The Driftwood, Danny wisely decided to devote himself exclusively to the entertainment business. Anybody want to buy a barrel of egg foo yung, cheap?

The O'Neils return from Florida: Pati and Danny with children, Kathi and Tommy.

"$50 Not Much to Kiner, BUT"—Barry

THE Cubs are modifying their demands of $100 for personal appearances—but not for television. The Bruins have agreed to appear for free at charitable affairs and to cut their demands from $100 to $50 for in-the-park interviews. However, they remain adamant about a $100 minimum fee for TV guest appearances.

Last week, suave Bob Elson expressed his dissatisfaction. This week handsome Norm Barry, who features guests every night on his popular WNBQ sports show, airs his views.

Barry

"We have a policy at WNBQ whereby we pay baseball players $50 for a four-minute interview. They are not asked to appear in uniform or to perform in any way. They gladly appear," said Barry, "because in most cases they need the publicity.

"Cub pitcher Hal Jeffcoat was recently scheduled to appear on my 10:30 PM show for the customary $50. He gladly accepted. Then later, after Kiner's edict, he rescinded saying he was forced to go along with the club's $100 demands. Consequently, Jeffcoat was not interviewed and lost the $50 to boot.

"Fifty bucks may not be much to a guy like Kiner, but to players like Jeffcoat—it's money," continued Barry. "We will not change our policies just to accommodate the Cubs. We'll continue our present $50 plan with or without 'em!"

Next Week: Jack Brickhouse, Jack Drees and Tom Duggan give their views . . . Are the White Sox planning a similar edict? We'll have more next week.

TV GUIDE RATINGS

	Rated	B	W	L	D	KO's
Martinez	unrated	39	36	3	0	20
Davey	unrated	46	40	4	2	26

Davey and Martinez are two of TV's darlings. Both have big bobby-sox followings. They are evenly matched in every respect. Vince's big problem will be to solve Chuck's southpaw style, while Chuck will be kept busy avoiding Vince's heavy punches. The bout may be decided by Martinez' lack of stamina or Davey's tendency to cut easily.

A Relative Question

My aunt was in a betting mood the other night. She claims that Mary Martin and Dean Martin are brother and sister. I strongly objected, saying that they are not related. Would you please tell us who is right? —Mike Hoolahan, Chicago, Ill. (You're so right. Mary and Dean are not related.—Ed.)

Martin

No Derby For TV

Some time ago there was an article in TV GUIDE about the Roller Derby. It said that it was coming back to TV and that it would be on every Sunday afternoon. We always enjoyed the Roller Derby, and since then we have waited and waited and nothing has happened. Is it coming back to TV?—Mrs. Jane Siford, La Porte, Ind. (Original plans did not materialize. No further plans are being made at this time.—Ed.)

A Song For Perry

Would like to have Perry Como's address as I have a song or two I would like to have him sing. He is our favorite singer on TV.—Mrs. Michael Drinan, Morris, Ill.—(Write him at 45 Madison Ave., New York 22, N. Y.—Ed.)

Banish Bing to Bush Leagues?

Bing Crosby is batting a lofty .000 in the TV league with two shows and two floppers. I like informality, but Crosby appeared to be bored. His performance was truly "radio with pictures."—J. Sebela, Chicago.

Instrumentally Ideal

I have seen the Art Van Damme Quintet on the Bob and Kay Show and also on Close-Up. I think that they are the "ideal" instrumental group. I would like to get a picture of the whole group. Where could I write to them?—N. Smith, Chicago, Ill. (Write the Van Dammes c/o NBC, Merchandise Mart, Chicago, Ill.—Ed.)

Less Squawk, More Talk

I am a great fan of Bert Parks and I like his show, Break The Bank, but his singing is very annoying. After all he is an MC and not a crooner. If it is necessary to clue the contestants, a few bars of the song would be permissable. The time he wastes singing could be put to better use by bringing on more contestants.—Sue Grennan, Chicago, Ill.

She's The Greatest

I just finished reading Bob Sorenson's letter about Jane Froman. I know that we all have different tastes, but Jane is one of the best singers on TV. She's real easy on the eyes, too. She's a great entertainer and a great human being.—Helen McCabe, Chicago, Ill.

Conrad's Barnyard Cackle

I think that Elmer The Elephant is a terrible show. John Conrad, Elmer's pal, is the silliest grown man I have ever seen. That laugh of his is the most countrified laugh I've heard in a long time. This show is certainly a flop with Conrad on it.—Richard E. Davis, Chicago, Illinois.

PROGRAM OF THE WEEK

Mr. and Mrs. North, after a short layoff, is back on TV this spring with a new format, and one that has improved the show considerably. Where it used to feature a kind of Burns and Allen motif, with a murder tossed into the script only incidentally, North now is playing it almost straight down the middle. Adventure and mystery have replaced farce, and a more entertaining and suspenseful half hour results.

Not that the show has given up on humor entirely. Barbara Britton and Richard Denning, continuing in the title roles, are both handsome and affable actors who inject their personalities pleasantly into each week's story. But Miss Britton is no longer vying with Gracie Allen for the role of TV's zaniest wife; and Denning, doffing the bemused-husband look of George Burns, has become a solid, criminal-chasing citizen. Lt. Bill Weigand, the police official, is more important, too. Substituting drama for fluff, the show carries more weight and authority.

Pam Gets Involved

The new setup probably follows more closely the original North characterizations as conceived some 20 years ago by writers Frances and Richard Lockridge. Pam North is usually the one who gets the couple involved with sundry bank robbers, murderers, con men, and other criminals. Then it's up to her husband, Jerry, to extricate them and simultaneously solve the crime.

With better writing and good production, Miss Britton and Denning have more chance now to display their acting talents. Francis DeSales makes a suitably grim-faced Weigand. Supporting players include some of Hollywood's top feature actors.

All in all, it's one of the better shows.

Two against crime: Barbara Britton and Richard Denning as Mr. and Mrs. North.

Adolphe Menjou

Favorite Story

ADOLPHE MENJOU was once known as one of the best-dressed men in Hollywood. His wardrobe plus a series of interesting playlets are now on view via Favorite Story, with Menjou as narrator and occasional star. The plays are fortunately good enough to establish Menjou's TV reputation as an actor and a pleasant host rather than a Beau Brummel.

As a weekly telefilm show, Favorite Story is burdened with the same difficulties that beset most dramatic programs—what do we do for scripts? But it has been more fortunate than some. The stories, treading a thin line between farce and tragedy, seldom touches either. At the same time, they seldom lapse into cloying romances and boy-meets-girl stuff. The emphasis is on pleasantly innocuous yarns, usually with an O. Henry-type tagline.

The producers, moreover, have cast their plays well. Most of the actors are lesser-known Hollywood players, whose faces are more familiar than their names. And with Menjou on hand to give the show that star appeal, Story should continue to hold its place as one of the better telefilm dramatic series.—R. S.

FINE TUNING

CONGRESS raps Army television programs. The House thinks the Army belongs in TV like Berle belongs in Dien Bien Phu.

The program was to bring in recruits, and so far 12 guys have volunteered for the chorus line.

One guy wouldn't like the Army show, if it were Robert Montgomery Presents Arms. He's willing to watch Three Steps to Heaven, but the Army insists on 25-mile hikes in the opposite direction.

The show was like a giveaway program, with free trips to Korea.

This boy tuned in once and struck it rich—all the potatoes he could peel and his own 85-pound knapsack. He was leading the life of Riley, but Riley was in the same work detail. One fellow thought the show was a million laughs, but he was 4-F.

Fellow watched one show, enlisted, and found out he was in the Rocket Rangers. At war with Saturn.

The Army show may not have been perfect, but it isn't every TV show that can trust its viewers with a gun.

NEXT Sunday, after two years of timorous, all - but - kissless romance, TV's bucolic boy scout, Robinson Peepers, marries Nancy Remington. Among those who have been viewing this with alarm and surprise are Wally Cox and Patricia Benoit. Pat, already happily married, had previously confided, "Wally always told people Robinson would never marry."

Why Mr. Peepers took a Mrs.

Wally, a bachelor who's willing to see both sides of the question, said, "Peepers never struck me as having the nerve to marry. He's not only out of step with the world; I think he's a pretty ineffectual male. Pat and I used to speculate on what Peepers really does think—or do. I kind of look at him in wonder, don't you?"

Now everybody knows that Robinson Peepers is a mild-mannered schoolteacher intensely concerned with the courting capers of insects, frogs and birds—and only dimly concerned with the courting habits of American men. Yet here was Wally Cox, just an interested spectator in the curious love life of Mr. Peepers.

"If people want to think of me as Peepers, I don't care. Some time ago, within the same month, I read two stories. One was titled, 'Wally Cox Is Mr. Peepers'; the other, 'Wally Cox Is Not Mr. Peepers.' "

The truth is that Wally Cox has been psychoanalyzed. "I used to try to please the whole world. That might be Peepers-ish. But that's so unrealistic. I don't even mind not making friends, now. I mean, in a restaurant people will beckon—with one little crooked finger—for me to come over. They expect Mr. Peepers to jump through hoops. Well, I won't."

A Pair Of Peepers Perks The Plot

It was clear that this was a man to be reckoned with, after a fashion. Whatever his past objections, however, this love match would be a convenience. Nothing could be more fitting for a family show. Marriage would open up new story lines. It is definitely popular with women. It sets an example for America's youth. And Nancy's luck might encourage all impatient, single girls.

"Nancy might also look foolish dating a man for two years without getting anywhere," Wally suggested. "My writers would be the ones who know."

Writers Jim Fritzell and Everett Greenbaum knew. "This boy has been maturing," they said. "At first, if Peepers brushed up against Nancy, he almost fell through the floor. Now he's kissed her a couple of times."

Friend busses fiancee: Wes (Tony Randall) and Nancy (Pat Benoit.)

Fritzell, the more loquacious of the pair, took over. "These kids are in love. They glow. They both go for the simple things in life, like the smell of honeysuckle."

"They're giving him a backbone," Wally ventured.

"You're right," Fritzell continued. "Peepers may be a shy, naive guy out of his element. But there's nothing wrong with him. We never want to play him as a moon-eyed goof who bumbles everything. Incompetent, maybe, but not a milksop.

"This is a dynamic, growing show. Look at Marge and Wes—they married and had a baby. We'd like to create something similiar to Thornton Wilder's 'Our Town.' Lots of story sequences and all the time people growing."

Suddenly, the Peepers personality was in the room. But Wally Cox was still an onlooker. Jim Fritzell was glowing, like a man in love, like a man about to be married.

Wally said, "I was worried about Peepers' marriage and what it would do to the show. But our director, Hal Keith,, keeps saying, 'This will positively not degenerate into a family situation comedy—the idiot husband sort.' If it did, they'd have to get a new actor."

Fritzell asked, "How would you like Peepers to elope? I can see it now. Everyone has been offering so many suggestions these two kids haven't had a chance to decide anything themselves. Visualize them visiting a sleepy Justice of the Peace, then in a sort of shabby hotel."

"With a glow on?" Wally queried.

Fritzell didn't hear. "Actually, Nancy would like a big church wedding."

"Because she never had one of her own," Wally countered.

"Tragic," Fritzell mused. "Definitely tragic for these two little people not to be in the most glamorous surroundings. But Nancy doesn't care. As long as she has her man, nothing else matters. Nancy is worldly-wise."

To Flee Or Not To Flee . . .

Elopement or posh wedding? The question is agitating members of the Peepers cast almost as if the impending nuptials were the real thing. They all have opinions on which type of wedding would be most in character—Wes, Marge, Mrs. Gurney and, of course, Nancy's parents (Ernest Truex and Sylvia Field).

Mr. Peepers and his future Mrs. have been posing for formal wedding pictures. But that doesn't mean the manner of the wedding is set.

Far from it. And if producer Fred Coe has his way, no one will know for certain until Sunday.

"The advantage of live TV over film," says Coe, "is that nothing happens until the minute it happens. A man doesn't make elaborate plans to elope. He just does. When the time comes, Mr. Peepers will—or he won't."

NEARLY ALL ASPECTS OF NATION'S LIFE HAVE FELT THE IMPACT OF TELEVISION

IN THE "trade"—at broadcast stations and among the talent and advertising agencies—they sometimes refer to television as "The Monster."

What they mean is that TV doesn't know its own strength. It is a force having the most powerful effect upon American economy and habits since the advent of the automobile.

In a handful of postwar years, it has proved itself one of the most persuasive merchandisers of goods and ideas in history. It affects almost everything it touches, and the length of its reach never ceases to amaze.

There was, for instance, the farmer in Ontario, Canada who discovered that a TV set in his barn made the cows relax and give more milk.

On the other hand, the spokesman for a national organization of restaurateurs complained that folks weren't coming into town anymore to dine in style on maid's night out. Instead, they remained at home, had a quiet bite, and settled down for a long, quiet evening among the quiz and variety shows, the antique movies, and the comics that flitted across their TV screens.

In Little Rock, Arkansas an official of the municipal transit system sought a rate boost because evening revenue of the trolleys and buses had fallen off sharply. Why? People were staying home to watch TV.

But the Monster performs more than a fair share of good deeds for communities, too. Paul A. Walker, former chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, told a Congressional committee last year:

". . . Experience shows that within two years after a station goes on the air, the great majority of families in that community buy TV sets ranging in price from $200 to $400. This, in turn, creates business for the local retailer, the local TV serviceman, and the local public utility.

"It is a source of entertainment, news and information—an outlet for local groups—a dramatic means of tying in that community with the National community. And the station is paying out annually anywhere from $200,000 to over $1,000,000 in wages and salaries to local technicians, salesmen, entertainers, and other station personnel, as well as paying taxes of one form or another to the local, state and Federal governments."

Not To Mention Popcorn

The Monster has provided a special stimulus for the furniture manufacturers. Today there is a whole new field—television chairs, television tables and television lamps. Hassocks took a new lease on life and cabinet manufacturers found a pot of gold at the end of the TV-set rainbow.

Television is altering skylines and changing the concept of the American home. The streamlined house of today has at least one room planned for convenient and comfortable viewing.

Even factories are compelled to make adjustments. The Federal Communications Commission has actually forced industries to eliminate or, at least, sharply curtail radiations from equipment which interfere with TV reception. This often calls for expensive shielding installations. It may result in new factory design.

Three years ago, a magazine of wide national circulation ran an illustrated article pointing out that TV was putting movies out of business.

"No such thing," shouted irate Hollywood magnates and theater owners. They raised such a ruckus that the magazine apologized. But in 1953, spokesmen for the industry admitted that the article not only was true but was guilty of under-emphasis.

A survey by the movie people developed this interesting fact. For each two per cent of television homes in a city, movie attendance falls by one per cent. This continues up to a peak loss of 40 per cent of business by the movie theaters in some towns. However, a much more recent study strikes a cheerier note. The peak loss is not sustained for more than a year or two. Thereafter the movie houses regain part of the lost business.

One of the Monster's great feats occurred at Chicago in 1952.

TV brought millions of Americans directly into the convention hall to watch the Republicans and Democrats choose their Presidential nominees. It got many people interested in the processes of government.

But that's not all. TV threatens to do what nothing else has been able to do these many years. It may force a change in the traditional pattern of political conventions.

TV viewers grumbled over the unnecessarily long-winded speeches. People began to wire their convention delegates about it. The two major parties are already seeking ways to streamline future conventions.

Then There Are Sports

Television is making the Nation more sports conscious than ever. From "rassling," up through boxing, baseball and football, to such special events as the Kentucky Derby, video is bringing sports into the homes of millions who never bought a ticket. There is evidence that the Big Gate is on the way back in some events. Part of the sports bill is paid by the $8,000,000 to $10,000,000 spent annually by sponsors of televised events.

Television is a long way from its peak, although American manufacturers are turning out more sets annually than the rest of the world combined. The black-and-white picture, potent as it is in selling merchandise, hasn't nearly the wallop of color video which has just appeared on the market. But even this isn't the end of the road. Predictions are that there is three-dimensional color TV in your future.—Herman Lowe.

IN THE NATION'S CAPITAL, IT'S

Washington Cherry Cake

By Phyllis Weaver

Miss Weaver conducts Kitchen Cupboard on WNBW, Washington

WASHINGTON, D.C., draws its population from all parts of the world. Because the "regular" citizenry is made up of people from all over the country, most of whom live in the Nation's capital for only a few years, local cuisine has no particular regional characteristics. Washington residents are cosmopolites. Few demand food just like Mother used to make. They ask only that it be good.

One of my own favorites, guaranteed to please your family and guests, is luscious Washington Cherry Cake.

Washington Cherry Cake

2¼ c. sifted cake flour, 1 1/3 c. sugar, 3 t. baking powder, ¾ t. salt, ½ c. saft shortening, ¼ c. juice from cherries, ½ c. milk, 12 maraschino cherries cut in eighths, 4 egg whites (½ c. unbeaten), ⅜ c. chapped nuts.

Grease and flaur 2 8-inch loyer pans. Sift tagether the flaur, sugor, baking pawder, and salt. Add shortening, juice from cherries, milk, and cherries. Beat 2 minutes. Add the unbeaten egg whites. Beat 2 minutes. Fold in nuts. Pour into prepared pans.

Boke at 350 degrees (moderate oven), for 30 to 35 min. Cool. Finish with caoked white frosting made with cherry juice in place of water. Decorote with bright red cherries.

SPORTS

Shaving Things Close

FRED Capossela is a lively, alert little man who is known to New York's thousands of horse-racing fans by the pear-shaped tones of his voice. Issuing from the public address systems at Belmont, Aqueduct or Jamaica, his precise words tell a spectator what he could see on the track if there weren't several hundred large, opaque strangers standing on chairs in front of him screaming, "Come on with him, kid!"

This year Fred was hired to "call" the "Triple Crown" races—the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont stakes—for the vaster audience of television viewers. He does a good job. When Fred pulls a bloater, it is a form reversal of staggering proportions.

Bryan Field, who has described these and other races often in the past, would do excellently, too, but he didn't get the job this time. This was not because he got mixed up on the identity of the leaders in the Florida Derby and the Wood Memorial.

He was barred because of guilt by association. A year ago he associated with the wrong sponsor. Hired to do the "Triple Crown" last year, he found himself sponsored in the Preakness and Belmont by the Schick Shaver. Consequently, Gillette won't have him.

This illuminating insight into life in the ad world suggests some provocative questions. Not only did Bryan Field speak for Schick last year, but Native Dancer, Jamie K, and Dark Star ran for the same sponsor. Did those steeds thus render themselves ineligible to race under the Gillette banner?

Are their owners, Alfred Vanderbilt, Jim Norris and Harry Guggenheim, no longer permitted to enter horses in events which advertise the keenest edges ever honed? How about allowing Eric Guerin, Eddie Arcaro and Henry Moreno to ride in such entertainments? Shouldn't the sponsor unfrock the trainers, Bill Winfrey, John Partridge and Eddie Hayward, and also boycott tracks like Pimlico and Belmont where a business competitor was harbored?

Ah, well, once upon a time Bill Corum was scolded for remarking over the air after a World Series game that Marty Marion had contributed the "fielding gem" of the day. Gem, get it?

OLD MOVIE (STUDIO) ON TV

'MAN AGAINST CRIME' IS FILMED ON SITE OF NICKELODEON EPICS

'The Pit,' a thriller being made at studio in 1912.

BACK in pre-Hollywood days of the early 1900's, movie producers were turning out their films in studios in the East. One of the most famous of these was established by Thomas A. Edison in The Bronx, N. Y.

The building, greatly enlarged and renamed Bedford Park Studios, is now the place where Ralph Bellamy's Man Against Crime films are shot. And these are for TV, not theaters.

The crude, hand-cranked movie camera has been replaced by electrically-controlled giants; the simple overhead lights have given way to banks of carefully controlled spots and floodlights. Today's sound system was only an idea in the back of Edison's mind when the walls first echoed the cry, "Roll 'em!"

Those early movies lured fans to nickelodeons seating 50-100 people. Man Against Crime is now seen by a TV audience of perhaps 15,000,000.
